Description

'Very, very funny ... makes for the best travel writing I have read in years' — Peter Allison, author of Whatever You Do, Don't Run

Cash Peters, an English radio and TV presenter who had moved to LA to chase his big break in Hollywood, thought he had finally struck gold when he was given his own reality-adventure TV show on a big-time travel network. The premise was simple: 'Let's dump this guy in an unfamiliar culture in a faraway land with no money and no place to stay and leave him to fall back on his own resources.' There was one major problem: Cash Peters really had no resources to fall back on. He was not at all adventurous. Especially when in faraway lands. He had a dozen phobias and food allergies, as well as a peculiar obsession with hygiene.

In Naked in Dangerous Places, Cash Peters recounts with wit and shameless honesty the behind-the-scenes mishaps and adventures he experienced travelling around the world and living among a variety of cultures, from the opal miners of the Australian Outback to the Maasai in Kenya. Along the way, he proves true the old saying, 'What doesn't kill you makes you stronger.' Though, to be honest, being killed was more likely.
