Description

Nin had never liked Wednesdays, but this one took the biscuit. On this Wednesday she woke up to find that it was raining buckets and that her brother had ceased to exist.

Ninevah realises she is the only person to remember Toby because whoever took him is about to make her disappear too. Enter Skerridge the Bogeyman, who steals kids for Mr. Strood. With his spindle, he draws all memories of Nin out of her mother's head. Nin escapes to the Drift, the world that her new friend Jonas and Mr. Strood inhabit. But the Drift is filled with the fabulous and the dreadful; tombfolk, mudmen, and the spirits of the seven sorcerers who once ruled the land. What is the secret of the Seven Sorcerers, and will Nin and Toby escape their fate at the House of Strood?

Caro King has evoked a new and resonant world in this truly magical novel.

Sales Points

- A rich, atmospheric novel in the vein of Cornelia Funke and Joseph Delaney
- Part one of an imaginative two-part series, suitable for children aged 9 years and up
- 'Seven Sorcerers was a delightful surprise. It [has] such a refreshingly original plot and cast of characters that I would highly recommend it to most children, girls and boys. Full of adventure, suspense, action and a little bit of mystery thrown in, this book is a real treasure. My copy also says that there will be another book, to which I say hooray!' – thebookbag.co.uk
