Description

From the outside, Jillian Westfield has a perfect life, complete with a cherubic 18-month-old daughter, a successful husband and a four-bedroom lemon-scented home. But that doesn't stop her from mulling over the past, from dwelling on the 'what ifs' that haunt her when she allows them to seep into her consciousness.

What if she hadn't married Henry? What if she hadn't abandoned her job at the first sign of pregnancy? What if she'd never left her boyfriend, Jackson? What if she answered the letter from her mother, who abandoned her as a child? In reality, under the shiny veneer of her life, Jill waddles around in a faltering marriage, brewing resentment and discontentedness.

When Jill's masseuse releases her blocked chi, she suddenly wakes up one morning to discover that she's been mysteriously transported seven years back in time. Back to her old life and her old self, back to the moments where she made decisions that charted her future course. She is faced with the same roadblocks, but this time, armed with hindsight, she has the chance to potentially choose a different path and finally answer 'what if'.
